How to keep your pet safe

A poster from the SPCA titled "PREPARE BEFORE A DISASTER". It features a red umbrella and a dog. The text includes: "Place a pet rescue alert sticker on your window.", "Be sure all pets have collars with up to date tags.", "Ask neighbors if they are able to assist with your pet in case you cannot make it home.", "Secure alternative plans with friends and family outside of your neighborhood.", "Create a Go-KIT with pet emergency essentials.", "Make a list of important phone numbers: local vet, boarding facilities and pet-friendly hotels.", "Identify any requirements needed from hotels and boarding facilities ahead of time.", "Monitor storms and evacuate with pets early!". Below the umbrella, it says "RETURNING HOME AFTER A DISASTER" and "Always assess damage before allowing pets to roam." At the bottom, it says "Give the areas surrounding your home, inside and out, a thorough inspection for debris that could be harmful to your pet." and "For more information, call 516-404-5513".

An icon showing a dog and a cat under a roof, with a red cross symbol next to it.

Unlike Super Storm Sandy in which the County authorized the operation of one large emergency pet shelter, the current County-authorized plan provides an emergency pet shelter adjacent to Red Cross shelter (or shelters) for people ("co-located" shelters).

We will cover the critical points of what every pet owner needs to know in order to be prepared.
